Dear Reader

The second edition of this bulletin for Japan focuses on the ICRC's appeal for funds for 2007. It includes information on the global budget and a breakdown of the figures for the Asia-Pacific. We will also briefly explain the main programmes the ICRC undertakes throughout the world.

The situation analysis on which the budget is based shows that the evolution of today’s armed conflicts is becoming increasingly difficult to predict. Apart from a limited number of wars between states, there is a growing number of highly complex internal conflicts involving numerous actors with diverse motives for taking up arms.

This volatile environment has implications for the ICRC’s worldwide network of 80 delegations and missions. The organization faces the ever-present risk of being rejected or even attacked by some actors who challenge its legitimacy. Meanwhile, others try to instrumentalise humanitarian action in support of their political or military agenda. In this environment, the ICRC strives to demonstrate the added value of its neutral and independent approach which focuses on gaining and maintaining access to all victims of armed conflict.

Its operations in Sri Lanka exemplify the ICRC's ambition of comprehensively addressing a wide range of humanitarian needs. Its role as a neutral intermediary has regularly allowed civilians and essential goods to cross the frontlines dividing the country.

Among the ICRC’s priorities is the tracing of persons missing because of armed conflicts or natural disasters. It works with 183 national Red Cross and Red Crescent Societies to build a powerful global network that helps separated family members to restore and maintain contact. In Japan, the ICRC's cooperation with the Cabinet Secretariat and the Japanese Red Cross Society on this issue will increase throughout 2007.

Finally, this bulletin features an article by our Japanese intern Masako Kataoka who has gained firsthand experience at the ICRC Regional Delegation based in Kuala Lumpur.

Many of you reacted to our first edition. We were encouraged by these comments and hope that with your help we can continue to improve. Thanks for your support.

Conflict is unpredictable, a truly global phenomenon that encompasses all aspects of life. Every day, atrocities are committed, thousands of people are displaced, and widespread violence occurs in countries throughout the world including Iraq, Sudan, Sri Lanka, Myanmar, Somalia, and Colombia. To be effective, the response of the ICRC must also be global. As the organisation’s president Jakob Kellenberger said recently, “Perhaps one of the main challenges faced by the ICRC is to effectively address the multiple needs of affected populations in extremely diverse environments.”

Last year was no exception. In 2006, the ICRC responded promptly and comprehensively to emerging or sudden humanitarian crises in Lebanon, Israel and the Palestinian Territories, Sri Lanka, Somalia and Timor-Leste. Tracing and Restoring Family Links activities, as well as visits to detainees took place in some 80 countries, and protection and assistance programmes were implemented to restore dignity and provide hope for people affected by conflict.

“Providing a professional humanitarian response to increasingly diverse and demanding situations of armed conflict and to other forms of armed violence around the world presents a daunting challenge,” said Jakob Kellenberger, president of the ICRC, on launching the institution’s annual appeal to donors.

Even with the best will in the world, the ICRC’s effectiveness depends on the support of donor countries, National Red Cross and Red Crescent Societies, and the private sector. The European Commission, the USA, the UK, Switzerland, the Netherlands, and Sweden continue to be the ICRC’s main sources of funding. The Government of Japan and the Japanese Red Cross contribute over US$ 20 million. The organisation began 2006 with a field budget of US$ 741 million. In the course of the year, seven additional budget extensions amounting to US$ 119 million were needed to respond to humanitarian emergencies.

For this year, the ICRC is asking donors for an initial amount of US$ 698 million for use in field operations. The reduction of approximately US$ 43 million compared to the 2006 initial budget, is due to lower spending plans for Sudan, Pakistan, Myanmar and Nepal. Meanwhile, expenditure for Israel and the Palestinian territories, Iraq, Afghanistan, Chad, the Democratic Republic of Congo, Uganda and Colombia is due to increase.

How will the funds be used?
In 2007, the ICRC will continue to reinforce its protection activities, focusing on monitoring the living conditions and treatment of detainees, advocating respect for the rights of civilians affected by war and on tracing missing persons. It will also pursue efforts to promote the relevance of International Humanitarian law (IHL) in armed conflict situations. In addition, the ICRC will strengthen its capacity in basic health care, including for detainees, and hospital management. Throughout the ICRC is ever mindful of the pivotal role played by national Red Cross and Red Crescent Societies, and coordinates its work with other humanitarian actors to optimise support for those in need.

Sudan will remain the largest operation for the fourth consecutive year, followed by Israel and the Palestinian territories, Iraq and Afghanistan. In the Asia-Pacific, reconstruction work in Pakistan after the 2005 earthquake, and the consequences of increased conflict in Afghanistan and Sri Lanka, as well as armed violence in the Philippines and Southern Thailand, will require major human and financial resources. Also, there are indications of a worrying trend in Myanmar with regard to protection of civilians and detainees.

These, and more, are the challenges facing the ICRC in 2007-2008. We need the support of donors and our partners in humanitarian action in order to ease the hardships experienced by people affected by conflict.

General Situation
Renewed fighting between the government security forces (SLSF) and the Liberation Tigers of Tamil Eelam (LTTE) has resulted in further casualties among civilians and in thousands of newly displaced families. Of the 35,000 displaced civilians trapped for the past three months by heavy fighting in Vakarai, about 15,000 have managed to flee the area and reach the government-controlled area in the southern part of the district. The displaced are presently being housed at 36 different sites and assisted by several humanitarian organizations as well as the Government of Sri Lanka. In the meantime, another 4,000 civilians have fled the fighting in the eastern part of Trincomalee district and reached the town of Kantale, where they are sheltering around the local schools and temples.

Kantale
As the day began in Mutur in the Trincomalee District, an eastern city of the Sri Lankan island, its residents had already been walking for days saving whatever was left from a lifetime. Lines of men, women and children formed a sad colorful moving towards Kantale, getting further away from the golden beaches. Fleeing the ongoing conflict, they traded the comfort of their homes against the security of tents which seemed like a safe haven. Kantale accommodated about 45,000 Internally Displaced People (IDP) within temporarily built camps scattered in paddy fields. The International Committee of the Red Cross there to witness their arrival and bring them assistance.

On 18 August 2006, I was not supposed to be in Trincomalee district that early, least in a camp with those vulnerable people. A very fortunate course of circumstance took me among these IDPs. I missed the ICRC shuttle which was supposed to reach Trincomalee town 2 hours later. Therefore, I took a ride halfway through my journey which arrived in Al Tariq camp in Kantale. As I arrived I was surrounded by hundreds of people who each had a demand, a request, a need to be fulfilled.

An old woman approached me and asked for a pair of glasses “I have lost mine as we were running away from the shelling”. As I looked at her she told me how she had to flee her home with her family “now I don’t see well and it is difficult for me to take care of our everyday needs”. Instinctively, my nursing background took the toll on the situation and I showed her a finger asking her how many it was, and then a second and a third finger as I was trying to move my arm away from her eyes. The crowd around us was at first grinning. As my examination went along, people became more assertive and their laughter got louder. The old woman was also amused and by the time I was through with my prompt consultation she had joined the others in their joivainty. I explained to her that ICRC was not able to replace her eye glasses at that time, and that other type of distribution would start in few hours. She nodded her head as a sign of understanding while still smiling. It seemed that for a few minutes these people had forgotten the bitter taste of their situation.

Even though I was not able to respond positively to the request of that person, I felt happy that I had brought a brief moment of happiness into their weary hearts. I had been able to make people forget their sadness temporarily and that was just another brick set in the well of hope. Distribution of Non-Food Relief Items, shelter and water are not the only activities of the International Committee of Red Cross; Caring, Listening and bringing hope are the basis of its everyday work.

As at 20 December 2006, the ICRC has:

• evacuated, in cooperation with the Italian Red Cross, 30 injured civilians by boat from Vakarai to Valachchenai hospital, a better-equipped facility in the government-controlled area.

• lent support for the 10-day "Chikungunya and Dengue Control Days" campaign run by the health authorities in Kilinochchi. It has also donated dressing and injection materials to Kantale Base Hospital, and continues to provide support to SLRCS mobile health teams in Batticaloa and Jaffna.

• assisted more than 500 families who fled the fighting in Vakarai and sought shelter in the government-controlled area of Batticaloa district. It has provided displaced civilians at sites in Alankulum and Kiram with shelters, latrines and sanitary facilities, as well as several water distribution points.

• provided more than 350 tents and distributed construction material to build more than 300 shelters. It has built more than 40 at the same site. It is distributing more than 20 cubic metres of drinking water every day at each site.

• has provided basic assistance (mats, jerry cans, hygiene kits and other essential household items) to thousands of displaced people in Kantale town, Vakarai, Jaffna, Thirunagar, Thondamanagar, Pesalai, Kandavallai, and Kilinochchi, among others. In the Batticaloa district, the ICRC, working with SLRCS volunteers, has assisted families in Changaladi district, and in Alankulum and Urugamam.

• cooperated closely with the Sri Lanka Red Cross Society to help members of families separated by the conflict to restore and maintain contact with one another. Since 1 December 2006, it has collected 179 family messages and distributed 212.

• registered or held private interviews with 294 detainees during 39 visits in 38 places of detention.

• acted as a neutral intermediary to facilitate the crossing of some 10,000 civilians at Omanthai and Uyilankulam lines.
ICRC地域代表部でのインターン体験

「あらまし」街中でも職場でも、驚いたマレーシアの人があつぶやいのをよく耳にします。この国に来てインターンを始めてから3ヶ月。今日はインターンの仕事の中で経験したたくさんの「あらまし」の中からいくつかをご紹介いたします。

この私の第一の仕事は、日本を担当するスタッフの補佐です。スタッフの日本訪問を前に、連絡調整のサポートや基本情報の収集を行います。また、日本においてシェアープリント等の国際人道法の国内実施がどの程度すんでいるのか、さまざまな資料から得た情報をまとめ、報告することも大切な役割です。日本人であることとは日本語資料の収集が可能な点で利点が多い一方、事務所で唯一の日本人としての責任も感じています。

30th Anniversary of Additional Protocols

8 June 2007 will mark the 30th Anniversary of the Additional Protocols of the Geneva Conventions. Established in 1977, the Additional Protocols I and II extend extra protection to victims of international and non-international armed conflicts. They seek to improve protection for civilians and other combatants by taking into account new realities on the battlefield, in particular the emergence of guerrilla warfare and modern weaponry.

The cornerstone of Additional Protocol is the requirement that parties to an armed conflict distinguish at all times between the civilian population and combatants, and between civilian objects and military objectives.

Additional Protocol II is the first ever treaty devoted exclusively to the protection of the individual and restriction on the use of force in non-international armed conflicts, the majority of today's conflicts. It details the fundamental guarantees for people who do not, or who no longer directly participate in hostilities, including those in detention.

A total of 194 countries have become party to the Geneva Conventions, meaning they have been universally accepted, while 166 countries are party to the First Additional Protocol and 182 countries are party to the Second. Japan became party to both treaties in 2004. The ICRC aims to ensure that the Protocols attain the same degree of universality as the Conventions.

The 30th Anniversary is an appropriate time to highlight both the value and the significance of the Additional Protocols, particularly their impact on the protection of civilian victims of armed conflicts.

The ICRC Receives Presidential Award

On 7 December 2006 in Manila, Philippine President Gloria Macapagal Arroyo cited the International Committee of the Red Cross as one of the recipients of the Presidential Awards for Filipino Individuals and Organisations Overseas. Established in 1991, the biannual Awards are given for "exceptional achievements and unprecedented efforts to help Filipinos residing overseas". Specifically, the organisation was commended for setting up a Family Links website for Filipinos working and living in Lebanon. More than 30,000 Overseas Filipino workers were in Lebanon at the outset of the conflict, and many families used the website promoted by ICRC Manila.
